States, weren't you?

Yes, yes. In the course of travelling to Oak Ridge, while under surveillance, observation, etc. by the government, I made my way to L.A., to Henry's place at Westwood, and said in effect to him, "Look, Henry, I have some money as a physicist and I'm interested in your writing--do you know what to do with, so I ended up publishing 17 of his, the first being--What Are You Going to Do About Alf-- I guess I sold it for about $1.50, but after I'd published it someone called my attention to the four-letter words and such, and said "you're a fine Colby graduate, a respectable physicist, a methodist of good standing, how could you do this?"

One day I was called before the draft board. Luckily, one drafter knew what physics was, and so instead of running around in trenches with a gun, I was told to report to Princeton. I was interviewed, and accepted, and so I was shipped to the Princeton Physics Department where I worked with some grad students under me, testing and separating isotopes. In those days we didn't know what Uranium was, and so the janitor would come and just sweep the stuff up. Nowadays they have special suits to wear, mechanical hands, and a wall separating you from the Uranium and then you can touch it. Back then we were breathing it.
I have been irradiated.
